Introduction/Course Overview

Elections are the lifeblood of democracy. They potentially provide chances for voters to evaluate incumbent parties, they compel parties to endorse policy directions and court public support for them, and compel leaders to be responsive to public demands.

This class will provide a survey of cross-national variations in what people think about political questions and how they decide who to vote for. The emphasis will be on understanding why electoral competition has divergent outcomes across different countries. In doing so, we will study the changing role of class and issues in elections, how voters respond to changes in the economy, and the role of identity politics. We will also attempt to explain why elections often seem to revolve around personalities and handouts instead of programs in many contexts.

Through this course, we will see that frequently electoral competition in other countries takes on forms that are very different that what we usually experience in the U.S. Hence our intuitions about democratic politics may not automatically travel to these other contexts. Through this study, we will also see that these differences in political competition shape the way in which voters interact with the state, the types of political interests that get expressed, and the policy outputs generated by a government.

Expectations/Grading

The course will combine lecture and discussion. To facilitate the latter, it is expected that students will have done the assigned readings before coming to class, will be able to summarize their main arguments, and will have absorbed the descriptive facts presented in them. Some of these readings are very technical; I want you to do your best with the presentation of the statistics but to read for the main ideas and for the way in which they are tested. In class, I will discuss the readings and also present additional evidence from other studies that you will be responsible to know. The exams will draw on both the readings and lectures.

Most of your grade will come from 2 in-class exams. The midterm will consist of short-answer questions. The final exam will consist of short-answer questions covering the latter half of the course and then a comprehensive essay component. PLEASE NOTE that the date of the final exam will be set by the university and cannot be changed—so do not book tickets (or let family members do so) until after exams are done. Similarly, the midterm is the Thursday before Spring Break—please plan to be here.

To help encourage you to keep up with the readings and also to help you know your standing in the class, I will do 11 quizzes throughout the semester. These will be done at the start of class and will cover all the readings for that week as well as the discussion in the previous class period. The lowest one will be dropped.

I don’t expect that any of you will try to cheat by copying each other’s work or using notes on the quizzes or the exam. If it were to happen, I will follow the University’s misconduct policies http://www.community.uconn.edu/academic_misconduct_faq.html and will fail you for the class. Please don’t do it.

Finally, I will grade on participation. Participation includes attendance in class, the ability to answer questions correctly (and ask good questions), and contributing to the discussion. Coming to class but never answering questions is not sufficient to get an “A” grade.

The break down of your grade is thus as follows:

- Final Exam: 45%
- Midterm: 35%
- Quizzes: 10%
- Participation: 10%

There is no extra credit.

Having said that, legitimate health, psychological, or family problems do arise throughout the semester. If this should occur, please come talk to me so that we can address their impact on your performance. Remember, however, delay makes it harder for me to help you. If problems arise, please come talk to me early; the best way to get out of a hole, after all, is to stop digging. Coming to my office hours if you are not understanding the material is also a good strategy—remember it is part of my job to answer your questions, but I cannot know you have them unless you ask me.

Required Text

The text is:

This book should be available on-line (just make sure you get the 5th edition).

We will also read from scholarly articles available from various e-journals the library subscribes to. See http://tk8nj5xn8a.search.serialssolutions.com/ for information on how to access them.

Topics and Readings

T, Jan 22th  Introduction-tips for the class
- Table 3.1 in Baglione
Th Jan 24th  How do we know who wins? Electoral systems
  o http://www.idea.int/publications/esd/upload/esd_chapter2.pdf

T Jan 29th  What do people fight about? Political cleavages
• Dalton Chapter 7

Th Jan 31st  Who Competes? The Party System
• Quiz #1 (this quiz will cover classes since Jan 24th)

T Feb 5th  What do people know about politics? Political sophistication

Th Feb 7th  What do people do in politics? Political participation
• Quiz #2
• Dalton Chapter 3

T Feb 12th  What do people value?
• Dalton Chapter 5

Th Feb 14th  How is politics organized? Ideology
• Quiz #3
• Dalton Chapter 6

T Feb 19th  Do voters even have to think? Partisan attachment
• Dalton Chapter 9

Th Feb 21st  Class Voting
• Quiz #4
• Dalton Chapter 8

T Feb 26th  Religion and Voting

Th Feb 28th  Gender and Voting
• Quiz #5

T Mar 5th  Do voters have issues? Spatial Voting Models
- Dalton pp. 198-204, 208-211.

Th Mar 7th  What do people think about welfare?
- Quiz # 6

T Mar 12th  Do voters have performance anxiety? The Role of the Economy

Th Mar 14th: Midterm exam in class (then have a nice and safe spring break)

March 19-21st: No Class-Spring break

T Feb 26th  Stuff you did (not I hope) experience on your spring break? Corruption and Crime
- Zechmeister, E., Zizumbo-Colunga, D., Forthcoming. The varying political toll of corruption in good versus bad economic times. Forthcoming in Comparative Political Studies

Th Mar 28th: Are looking at me? Charisma and the vote
- Quiz #7

T/Th Apr 2-4th Can I buy your vote? Clientelism
- Quiz #8 on Thursday

T Apr 9th  Populism

Th Apr 11th  How do I know who I am? Ethnic identity and electoral politics

• Quiz #9

T Apr 16th Am I a loser? Electoral defeat and attitudes toward political systems

Th Apr 18th What do people think about democracy?

• Quiz #10

T Apr 23rd Who protests?

• Norris, Pippa, Stefaan Walgrave, and Peter Van Aelst. 2005. 'Who demonstrates? Antistate Rebels, Conventional Participants, or Everyone?' Comparative Politics 37(2)189-205.

Th Apr 19th What do people think about the United States?

• Quiz #10

T Apr 30th Our Brand is Crisis (will finish the movie on Thursday)

Th May 2nd Finish movie, discuss, and then review

Exam Date: TBA by the University