at polisci.uconn.edu/undergraduate/advising. POLS 3995 courses may be counted towards part one only with the consent of the advisor. POLS 2993, 3991, 3993, 3999, 4994, and 4997W may not be counted towards part one. Interdepartmental (INTD and UNIV) courses may not be included in the 24 credits. No more than six credits of independent study, colloquium (POLS 4894), and/or field work (of which no more than three credits may be for POLS 3991) can be counted toward the 24 credits.

Related Courses

At least 12 credits in courses related to Political Science taken from one or more other departments. These courses must be numbered 2000 or higher and cannot be taken on a pass-fail basis. All 2000-level (or higher) courses in Anthropology, Economics, Geography, History, Human Rights, Philosophy, Public Policy and Sociology will meet this requirement. Any course within these departments that is cross-listed with POLS will count towards the major and not as a related. Certain other courses have been approved and are listed on polisci.uconn.edu. Courses not in the departments listed above or included on the pre-approved list may be approved as related courses at the discretion of the advisor.

ILCS 3291 Italian Internship

ILCS 4279 Capstone in Italian Studies

Education Abroad in Italy: Students are strongly encouraged to participate in a variety of UConn-sponsored Education Abroad programs (and also have the option of enrolling in non-sponsored programs). In either case, students should consult with the ILCS faculty to determine which courses will receive credits. Students who enroll in study abroad programs not sponsored by UConn do not necessarily receive UConn credits for their coursework.

In addition, the following rules apply:

- A minimum of 12 of the minor credits must consist of Italian courses taken in residence.
- Up to six credits may be met by ILCS 3293, with the consent of the advisor.
- UConn's Early College Experience courses may be counted towards the minor.
- A single course cannot satisfy more than one requirement.
